ABSTRACT

Results of the 1982-1983 Survey of Voluntary Support of Education are presented, including a narrative summary and detailed statistical tables. Reports of voluntary support are presented for 1,137 institutions, and support patterns over the past decade are examined, along with patterns for a core group participating in two successive surveys. Attention is also directed to national estimates of voluntary support for higher education by source and purpose, and to economic indicators and institutional expenditures. Statistics on support are presented for specific colleges and universities and private elementary and secondary schools. For each institution support in dollars is indicated for: current operations; capital purposes; six sources of support (e.g., business, alumni, foundations); bequests; annuities, life contracts, insurance; six kinds of support through the annual funds; nonalumni parent support; corporation matching gifts; and endowment market value. Summary tables of this information are also presented by type of institution. National estimates of voluntary support of higher education indicate that: total voluntary support rose $300 million in 1982-1983 to an estimated $5.16 billion; and corporate gifts reached the $1 billion level for the first time. Highlights

Higher Education

- Total voluntary support rose $300 million in 1982-83 to an estimated $5.16 billion, up 6.2 percent from 1981-82
- Corporate gifts reached the $1 billion level for the first time, rising by 13.9 percent and providing a record 21.5 percent share of total support. Corporate gifts surpassed foundation grants for the first time

Reports from Participating Institutions show that

- Gifts to private women's colleges rose 24.0 percent and to public four-year institutions by 15.9 percent
- Gifts of company products totaled $58.9 million; gifts of other in-kind items were valued at $98.5 million
- Alumni gifts to the annual fund grew 10.9 percent and the average alumni gift to the annual fund hit a new high of $109.10

Independent Secondary and Elementary Schools

Reports from the Independent Schools indicate that

- The 480 participants received $276 million in 1982-83, a 5.2 percent decrease from the $295 million received by 486 respondents in 1981-82
- Gifts from individuals provided 71.4 percent of all gifts; corporations provided a record 4.5 percent
- Unrestricted gifts accounted for 53.2 percent of all gifts; gifts for current operations rose 14.4 percent and were 60.6 percent of total gifts

Preface

This twenty-fourth Survey of Voluntary Support of Education has been jointly sponsored by the Council for Financial Aid to Education, the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and the National Association of Independent Schools, with the cooperation of several other national organizations. It is the latest in a series of studies of educational philanthropy dating from 1954-55.

The definitions used in the 1982-83 survey are as defined in Management Reporting Standards for Educational Institutions: Fund Raising and Related Activities, published in January 1983 by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education and the National Association of College and University Business Officers. They are essentially those used in prior years. Voluntary support excludes income from endowment and other invested funds as well as all support received from federal, state and local governments and their agencies; in editing the survey questionnaires, CFAE deleted all income from these sources when so identified by the reporting institution. Any enrollment figures not supplied by the colleges and universities were taken from The hep 1983 Higher Education Directory.

Since 1965-66, the survey information has been processed by computer, and most of the data supplied by the participating institutions have been stored on magnetic tape. The ready availability of this store of information makes it possible to undertake supplementary studies of educational philanthropy.

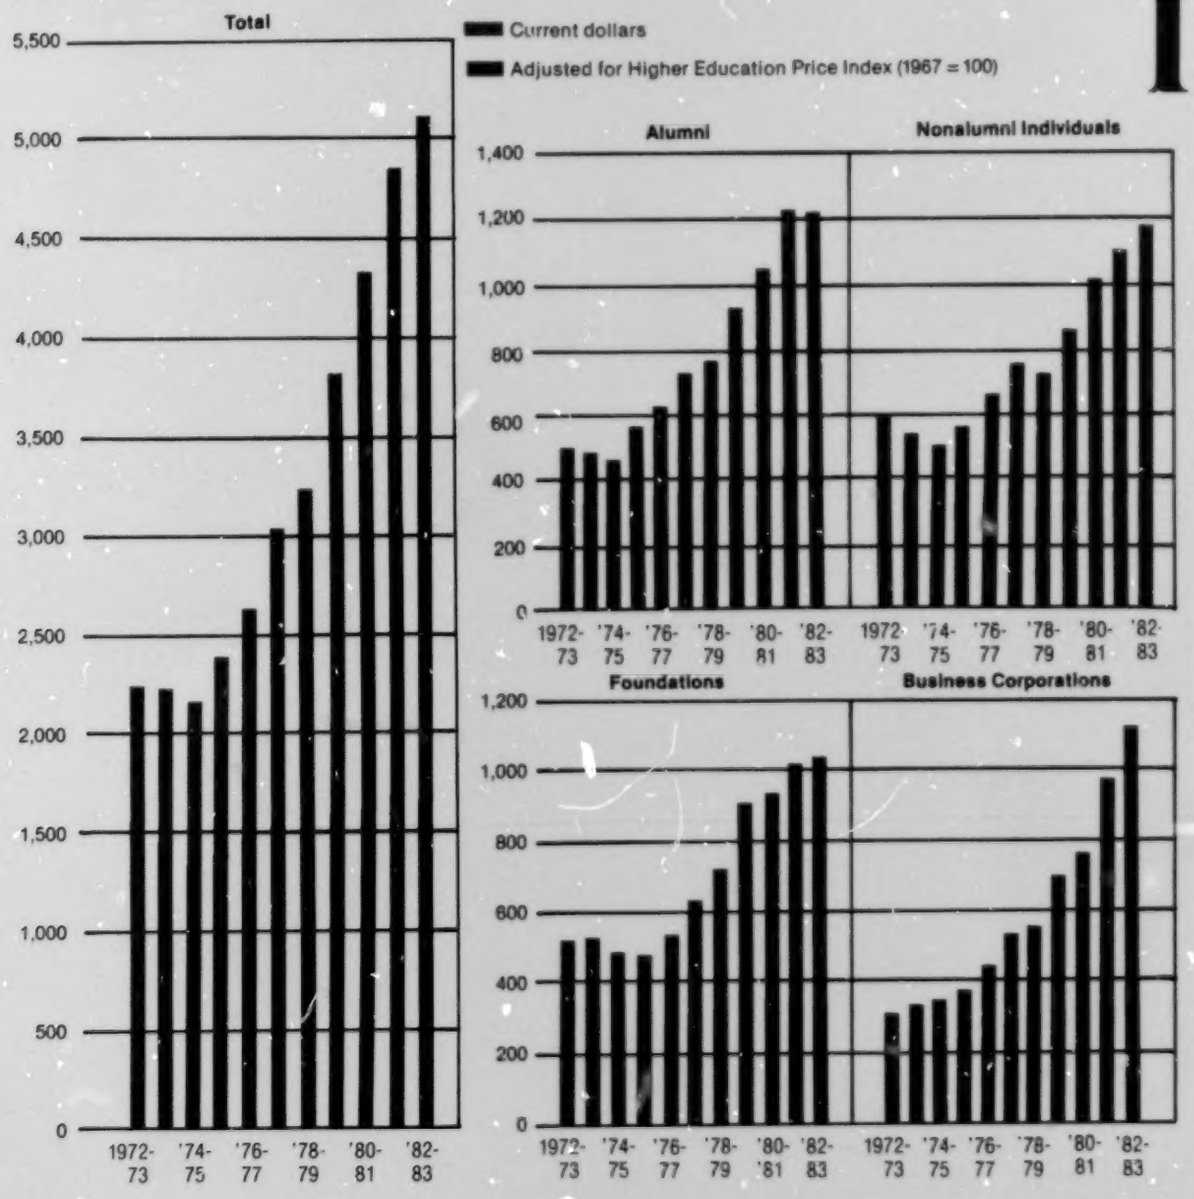
Chart 1. Estimated Voluntary Support of Colleges and Universities by Major Sources and in Total



I National Estimates

- Total voluntary support rose $300 million in 1982-83 to an estimated $5.16 billion. The rate of increase slowed to 6.2 percent from 14.9 percent in 1981-82
- Corporate gifts reached the $1 billion level for the first time, rising by 13.9 percent and providing a record 21.5 percent share of total support. Corporate gifts surpassed foundation grants for the first time
- Contributions for current operations reached an estimated $3.125 billion, an increase of 8.9 percent

Total support of colleges and universities edged up $300 million in 1982-83 to an estimated $5,160 million. This was an increase of 6.2 percent over the estimated total of $4,860 million in 1981-82 and was the first time that contributions to higher education have exceeded $5 billion. The increase was heartening since it occurred after an extraordinary rise in 1981-82 fueled by two bequests of $115 million and a single corporate gift of $30 million and despite three years of declines in corporate profits and two years of slowed growth in gross national product and personal income.

The rise in voluntary support easily surpassed the inflation rate of 4.6 percent, as measured by the Consumer Price Index (CPI), but was slightly slower than growth in the Higher Education Price Index (HEPI), which measures the cost of goods and services to colleges and universities. (See Chart 1 and Table 1.)

By Source

A fourth donor group joined the billion-dollar contributors — corporations. They not only joined alumni, nonalumni individuals and foundations in giving more than $1 billion to higher education in 1982-83, but their gifts also surpassed those of foundations. Gifts from corporations rose 13.9 percent in 1982-83, faster than did those from any of the other major donor groups. This is the fourth consecutive year that corporations have increased their contributions to higher education institutions by double-digit percentages. These increases are especially noteworthy, since corporate pretax net income declined by 33.1 percent between 1979 and 1983, and only began to rise rapidly in the second quarter of 1983.

Some of the rise in corporate gifts may be explained by growth in gifts of company products. These gifts were encouraged by more liberalized rules for valuing them as charitable deductions authorized by the Economic Recovery Tax Act (ERTA) of 1981. In the 1982-83 survey 1,137 institutions reported almost $59 million in gifts of company products. Since a number of institutions carry such gifts on their books at a nominal value of $1, their total value was probably much larger. As college accounting systems are better able to report their true value, future surveys will be able to assess the impact of such gifts on voluntary support of higher education more accurately.

The colleges reported another $98 million in gifts-in-kind. These include such items as rare books, art collections, land and other non-cash items. Some of these gifts came from donors other than corporations. Future surveys will attempt to find out the amounts given by the different donor groups.

Gifts from alumni declined in 1982-83 for the first time since 1974-75. The decline was tiny, however (0.2 percent, or $3 million), and it should be remembered that alumni gifts in 1981-82 included two record-breaking bequests totaling $115 million from Edward Mallinckrodt, Jr. (in no other year did total gifts from all alumni rise by as much as $100 million). If the Mallinckrodt bequests were excluded from the 1981-82 totals, alumni giving in 1982-83 would have risen 10.0 percent.

Gifts from religious organizations rose at an all-time-high rate of 17.7 percent. Their share of all higher education contributions, however, was only 4.0 percent, down considerably from its peak of 10.4 percent in 1957-58.

Corporations more than doubled their gifts to higher education institutions between 1977-78 and 1982-83. Growth in grants from three of the major donor groups — alumni, corporations and foundations — outpaced the rises in both the CPI and the HEPI.

†Includes $115 million in bequests and $30.4 million gift-in-kind.

By Purpose

Gifts with no restrictions from the donor on how they are to be used regained some of the share of total voluntary support lost in 1981-82. At 29.2 percent of the total, however, they are still below the level of a decade ago. Support for faculty compensation and research also registered gains that exceeded the overall gain in total support. Like unrestricted gifts, both are regaining some of the share lost to "other" purposes in the last several years. Growth slowed in contributions for student aid after a one-year surge in 1981-82. The predictions of drastic cuts in federal student aid funds were not fulfilled, and the urgency for large increases in aid money cooled.

Between 1977-78 and 1982-83 both restricted and unrestricted gifts rose faster than both the CPI and the HEPI.

Increases in gifts for capital purposes slowed from the extraordinary rise in 1981-82 resulting from the Mallinckrodt bequests. The share of funds designated for current operations climbed in 1982-83 to 57.8 percent. This is nearer the 60/40 relationship between funds for current operations and capital purposes that has existed since 1974-75.

Institutional Expenditures and Voluntary Support

Voluntary support is only one concern of higher education administrators. Predicted enrollment declines and budget stringencies are of pressing concern to the economic health of the enterprise. There is some good news here, however, as can be seen in Table 2.

Overall college enrollment held almost steady in 1982-83 (down 0.1 percent from 1981-82), despite the demographic changes that would seem to make large declines inevitable in the next few years. The rate of growth in institutional expenditures has slowed somewhat in the last two years. Expenditures per student, which are at least one indication of educational quality, have turned up in terms of inflation-adjusted dollars for the first time in almost two decades. Although growth in voluntary support slowed somewhat in 1982-83, its impact per student increased in adjusted dollars.

The future continues to hold uncertainties that will put pressures on institutional budgets. Tuition hikes are increasingly difficult. There are fears that students will turn to public institutions in greater numbers because of lower tuition charges and wariness about obligating themselves for large, long-term loans. Return on investment of endowment assets is not as high as two years ago.

Inflation has slowed, however. Corporate contributions have continued to increase. Voluntary support is contributing a slightly larger share of institutional budgets. Although many other organizations are competing for private dollars, higher education still has a persuasive case to make. It has made that case successfully in the past. With reason and effort, it should be able to continue to do so in the future.

II Survey Results

- A record total of 1,137 institutions reported receiving $4.368 billion in 1982-83, an average of $3.842 million per institution
- The 926 institutions in both the 1981-82 and 1982-83 surveys reported an increase in total support of 6.6 percent. Gifts to private women's colleges rose 24.0 percent and to public four-year institutions by 15.9 percent. Corporate gifts rose 14.9 percent, the seventh straight year of double-digit increases
- Gifts of company products totaled $58.9 million; gifts of other in-kind items were valued at $98.5 million
- Corporate support from matching gifts rose by 26.7 percent
- Alumni gifts to the annual fund grew 10.9 percent, and the average alumni gift to the annual fund hit a new high of $109.10
- Support for faculty compensation rose by 19.7 percent and for research by 13.1 percent

This part of the survey report uses the actual figures reported by participants to provide two kinds of analysis: 1) details of the support raised during the year by the respondents — from whom, by whom and for what purpose; and 2) changes from year to year and over longer periods of time.

Analyzing changes over time is more difficult than analyzing annual details of support. Many institutions respond to the questionnaire every year, but some do so only intermittently. Meaningful comparisons between years require identical groups of respondents — a "core" group of institutions that have participated in the years compared.

The Recipients

Judged by the returns, 1982-83 was a more difficult year for college fund raisers than any since 1974-75. The 1,137 colleges and universities participating in the 1982-83 survey were the largest number since the survey's beginnings in 1954-55. But they reported receiving $4.368 billion in 1982-83, an increase of only $282 million over the $4.086 billion received by 36 fewer colleges in 1981-82. (See Table 3.)

Once again the private universities, the private coeducational colleges and the four-year public institutions, as groups, each reported receiving more than $1 billion in gifts. Almost three-quarters of the four-year colleges reporting were private, and they raised 68 percent of the funds. Ten years ago 76 percent of the four-year college respondents were private and received 78 percent of all voluntary support.

Comparisons of the total amounts reported by all institutions in 1981-82 and 1982-83 can be misleading because the number and characteristics of the institutions in each year are different. Dividing the total support for each institutional class by the number of respondents in that class partially corrects for these disparities. The results shown on Table 3 are varied. Total voluntary support increased only a modest 3.5 percent. Most groups reported increases from 2.5 to 8.2 percent. Private men's colleges (up 23.6 percent), private women's colleges (up 22 percent) and professional schools (down 3 percent) were the exceptions.

The individual reports of the two institutional core groups exhibiting the largest rises in support in 1982-83 reveal some interesting patterns. The women's colleges, for example, received increases of between 15 and 56 percent from each of the four major donor groups — alumni, other individuals, corporations and foundations. The four-year public institutions, however, raised only 10 to 25 percent more in 1982-83 than in 1981-82 from these four donor groups. These four donor groups give 93 percent of all funds raised by the women's colleges and 88 percent of all funds raised by the four-year public institutions.

Just as the total number of respondents is never constant, the number and character of core institutions vary from year to year, distorting comparisons between periods of time longer than two years. It is possible, however, to compare percentage changes for successive pairs of survey years for each class of institution, as Table 4 does for the five most recent pairs of survey years. The public four-year institutions have reported increases more consistently than any other institutional grouping, while the professional and specialized schools and the two-year institutions have reported extreme variations.

The Donors

Historically individuals have provided about 50 percent of all voluntary support. Foundations and corporations have accounted for another 40 percent, with foundations responsible for about three-fifths and corporations about two-fifths of that 40 percent. Corporations in each of the last seven pairs of survey years increased their gifts between 10 and 25 percent. In 1982-83 corporations for the first time gave more to colleges and universities than foundations gave. Their gifts now provide 21.6 percent of the voluntary support reported by participants. (See Table 5.)

Corporate support of public four-year institutions has increased dramatically in the last 20 years. From 1962-63 to 1982-83 corporate support of the public institutions rose an average 13 percent each year. During the same period corporate support of the private colleges grew an average 8.7 percent annually. In 1962-63, 71 percent of corporate gifts went to private institutions; by 1982-83 the private-college share stood at 54 percent of corporate donations.

1982-83 was the first year since 1974-75 that alumni support did not increase. As noted earlier, the very high base in 1981-82 as a result of the two Mallinckrodt bequests totaling $115 million kept alumni support from showing an increase in 1982-83.

Almost three-quarters of gifts from individuals — both alumni and others — are made to private colleges and universities. This pattern has remained constant over the years. Foundations have also made most of their grants to private institutions. They continued this pattern in 1982-83, when about 70 percent of their gifts went to private institutions.

Special Forms of Giving

The survey analyzes several special ways by which gifts are made to colleges and universities. The annual fund is a long-standing technique for gaining alumni support. Bequests, such as last year's Mallinckrodt gifts, and various forms of deferred gifts, such as annuities, are eagerly sought by most institutions. More than 1,000 corporations with matching-gift programs double, triple or quadruple the value of their employees' gifts to higher education. The Economic Recovery Tax

Act of 1981 encouraged corporations to donate company products through enhanced tax deductions for donations of equipment to be used in research and the teaching of research.

Annual Funds

Table 6 presents data about annual funds since 1972-73. Despite the small drop in total alumni support, alumni gifts to the annual fund increased 11.0 percent in 1982-83. The average gift rose to a record $109.10. The number of donors rose 6.0 percent and the participation rate reached 19.4 percent, the highest since 1966-67. Historically the annual fund accounts for about 39 percent of all alumni gifts.

Alumni of the various types of institutions responded differently to annual fund solicitations, as can be seen in Table 7. Between a fifth and a third of the graduates of private four-year institutions gave to the annual fund of their alma mater. About a seventh of their alumni/ae responded to annual fund solicitations from public four-year colleges, and slightly over a tenth from the two-year institutions gave.

In all classes of private institutions 1982-83 was the first year in which the average gift was more than $100 and at least 20 percent of the alumni solicited made a donation. Unfortunately, however, the growth in the average alumni gift to the annual fund has not kept pace with inflation. In the last five years the average gift to the annual fund for all institutions rose 31.5 percent, while the Consumer Price Index, the common measure of inflation, rose 55.9 percent. The growth in the amount raised through the annual fund stems more from expansion of the number of donors than from an increase in the gift size.

Bequests and Deferred Gifts

Bequests and deferred gifts in 1982-83 made up 28.8 percent of gifts from individuals. Prior to 1979-80 bequests and deferred gifts averaged 35.4 percent of all gifts from individuals. Since then, with the exception of 1981-82, when the Mallinckrodt bequests were made, these special gifts have averaged 28.9 percent of all gifts from individuals.

Matching Gifts

Employee gifts matched by corporations have been a steadily increasing source of funds for colleges and universities since 1966-67, when this survey began collecting these data (see Table 8). While total corporate support in 1982-83 increased 14.9 percent over 1981-82, funds from matching gifts grew by 26.7 percent. Over the last 16 years, while total corporate support has averaged a 9.7 percent increase each year, matching dollars have risen an average 20.3 percent annually. Their share of total corporate support has therefore more than quadrupled in this period.

Three groups of institutions received a fifth or more of their corporate support from matching gifts: private men's colleges at 40.4 percent; private women's colleges at 33.6 percent; and private coeducational colleges at 22.2 percent.

Gifts-in-Kind

The 1982-83 survey gathered information about gifts of company products and other in-kind items for the first time. The results are reported in Table 9. A few caveats are in order. Some colleges reported assigning only a nominal value of $1 to such gifts. Some did not separate corporate products from other in-kind gifts and thus did not provide any data, while others reported in-kind items from all sources, not just those from corporations, as asked for. Despite these discrepancies the data provide clues about this new opportunity for corporate gifts and will serve as a base for future analysis.

The $59 million in company products reported by colleges and universities appears to be consistent with the $96 million reported as product donations to all charities in 1982 by the corporations responding to CFAE's Corporate Support of Education survey. The value of the company products reported by the colleges and universities accounted for 6.3 percent of total corporate support and 1.3 percent of total voluntary support. These gifts, combined with other in-kind items, amounted to $157 million, which was 3.6 percent of total voluntary support reported by the 1,137 survey respondents.

The three special forms of giving – bequests and deferred gifts, matching gifts and gifts-in-kind – accounted for one-fifth of all voluntary support.

The Purposes

About 70 percent of gifts made to colleges and universities are designated for specific uses by their donors. (See Table 10.) This share has grown gradually over the last 20 years from about 65 percent. Although the sum of all gifts with restrictions is larger than that of grants without restrictions, the latter is the largest single category of gifts. Its percentage of total gifts increased in 1982-83. Much of this rise occurred at the four-year public institutions, the private women's colleges and the coeducational institutions. If the Mallinckrodt bequests and the Hearst gift in 1981-82 were excluded from the totals, gifts for "other" purposes would show an increase in 1982-83; otherwise, they do not. Gifts for faculty compensation grew from 5.8 percent in 1981-82 to 6.4 percent in 1982-83 because of large increases at the four-year public institutions, the private women's colleges and the private universities. Several schools in the last two categories have been seeking funds to increase the number of endowed chairs, evidently with some success.

Technical Notes:

A. In the listing on the following pages, Column 22 does not purport to show the total operating expenditures of the reporting institutions; it excludes the operating costs of dormitories, dining halls, student stores, and other "auxiliary enterprises" as well as all outlays of a capital nature.

B. In some instances the number of institutions listed is greater than the number tabulated, for two reasons: (1) some multicampus institutions are shown in summary as well as in detail; and (2) some of the component professional schools of major institutions are also listed separately.

Survey Results

- The 480 respondents received $276 million in 1982-83, a 5.2 percent decrease from the $295 million received by 486 respondents in 1981-82
- The year-to-year decrease for the 390 schools responding in both 1981-82 and 1982-83 was 5.4 percent
- Gifts from individuals represented 71.4 percent of all gifts; corporations provided a record 4.5 percent
- Unrestricted gifts accounted for 53.2 percent of all gifts; gifts for current operations rose 14.4 percent to 39.4 percent of total gifts

The 480 independent schools participating in the 1982-83 survey reported receiving $276,221,734, down 5.2 percent from the $295,043,761 received by 486 schools in 1981-82. The average per school was $575,462 in 1982-83, versus the $607,086 average reported in 1981-82.

Meaningful comparisons between the two years are difficult because of the different number and types of schools in each survey. Calculating the average amounts received for each school compensates for the numerical differences but masks differences in characteristics. A total of 390 schools participated in both the 1981-82 and 1982-83 surveys. The experiences of these "core" schools shed additional light on the nature of the year-to-year changes in voluntary support of the schools.

The core schools reported a 5.4 percent decrease in total voluntary support, primarily due to extraordinarily high giving by nonalumni individuals in 1981-82. Nonalumni as a group have historically provided about 38 to 40 percent of school donations. In 1981-82 their share rose to 43.3 percent, and the core institutions recorded a 53.4 percent increase in these gifts in that year. The large rise in 1981-82 provided an abnormally high base for comparison in 1982-83.

Over the years alumni and other individuals have provided about 70 percent of the private support of the independent schools, and foundations another 18 or 19 percent. Other groups and special events raised about 5 percent. This pattern continued in 1982-83. Corporations, however, have been giving increasing – although modest – amounts to independent schools. Their share rose to a new high of 4.5 percent in 1982-83, having gradually increased from 2.4 percent in 1972-73.

The changes reported by the core institutions confirmed these patterns. Corporate gifts increased by the highest percentage – 12.3 – although they started from a low dollar base. Alumni gifts rose 8.0 percent, foundation grants were almost steady with a 1.1 percent rise. Gifts from nonalumni individuals dropped by 19.2 percent.

The several ways in which gifts were made exhibited different patterns in 1982-83. The average alumni gift to the annual fund rose 2.7 percent to $121.02 from $117.87. More alumni responded to annual fund solicitations in 1982-83 than in the previous year – 28.1 percent versus 26.7 percent. Total alumni gifts to the annual fund therefore increased 11.0 percent to $33,483,862. The value of both bequests and deferred gifts declined in 1982-83. Both provided a smaller share of total voluntary support than they have in several recent years. Combined they accounted for 6.9 percent of total gifts and 9.7 percent of gifts from all individuals. Corporate matching gifts rose 22.3 percent to $4,666,343, or 37.4 percent of total corporate support.

Gifts of company products are growing in importance. This survey collected data about these donations and about other corporate gifts-in-kind in 1982-83 for the first time. Independent schools reported receiving $817,567 in company products and $2,258,304 in other in-kind items. Some schools reported in-kind gifts from both corporations and individuals in this latter category. Despite some differences in reporting the data, the combined total of $3,073,871 was a significant amount and represented 1.1 percent of all gifts to the independent schools.

Historically more than half the gifts to independent schools have been made with no restrictions about how they are to be used; the share in 1982-83 was 53.2 percent, down from the 57.0 percent share caused by the unusually large gifts by nonalumni individuals in 1981-82. Grants for physical plant also usually provide a large share of school support. In 1982-83 they accounted for 23.8 percent of all support. Student aid received the only other large share of total support – 10.4 percent in 1982-83.

The core institutions reported changes consistent with these. Unrestricted gifts were down 11.3 percent; gifts for restricted purposes rose modestly with one exception. Support for research, normally less than 1 percent of all grants, rose 77.8 percent, to almost $200,000.

Gifts are usually divided about three to two for capital purposes versus current operations. This was true in 1982-83. Table 11 shows how donor groups divided their gifts between current operations and capital purposes.

Table 12 provides a further breakdown of the purposes for which corporations made their grants. Despite the drop in corporate profits in 1982-83, corporations continued to increase their support of the independent schools at a rapid rate.
